BALCO celebrates Unnati Utsav with community

Balco celebrating Unnati Utsav.

■ From dispelling myths surrounding menstruation to equipping individuals with skills necessary for sustainable livelihoods, and providing primary academic support free of charge, people were felicitated for their inspiring action and driving positive change in their communities

KORBA, Apr 2

BHARAT Aluminium Company Limited (BALCO) successfully completed the 3rd edition of 'Unnati Utsav' under its Project Unnati, an event to showcase the entrepreneurial skills of the women from local communities.

The exhibition highlighted products crafted by women capacitated with entrepreneurial skills and organised into self-help groups under Project Unnati, and featured a range of decor items, confectioneries, food items, and health and hygiene products. The event saw participation from over 650 women from the nearby communities who are charting their own path towards financial independence.

Conducted for the third consecutive year, BALCO engaged women from communities in various games and cultural performances. During the event, these women showcased Karma and Raut, local dance forms from Chhattisgarh, celebrating the rich cultural heritage of the region. To raise awareness around social issues, they also participated in plays and performances addressing crucial topics such as women empowerment, menstrual health management, entrepreneurship, and girl education. The event also served as a platform providing promotional and earning opportunities for women from Self-Help Groups (SHGs), who had set up stalls with their hand-crafted food and decor items in the exhibition open to general visitors.

It needs to be mentioned here that BALCO has established 7 micro-enterprise units under Project Unnati offering 12 products, including Gonkra folk art (Chhattisgarh's local art form), Chhattisa (local cuisine), clay idols, mural art, mushroom cultivation, paper bags, among others. This project, running in partnership with GPR Strategies and Solutions (GPRSS), a non-governmental organization (NGO), has impacted over 5,700 women in BALCO's surrounding communities.

BALCO CEO and Director Rajesh Kumar said, "BALCO is committed to supporting women from local communities on their journey of self-reliance by providing them with skills training, financial literacy, and market linkage. Through Project Unnati, we aim to promote the financial empowerment of women, enabling them to establish their individualistic identity within the society and contribute to the growth and progress of their families, society, and the nation."

In addition to the performances, BALCO had also recognized 16 individuals from the communities for their remarkable contributions to social causes, under BALCO's social initiatives on health, education, skills, and sustainable livelihoods. From dispelling myths surrounding menstruation to equipping individuals with the skills necessary for sustainable livelihoods, and providing primary academic support free of charge, these individuals were felicitated for their inspiring action and driving positive change in their communities. The company also launched an additional van under its Mobile Health Van (MHV) initiative during the event, furthering its commitment to the health and well-being of the communities.
