Delighted to see schemes like 'Namo Drone Didi' being launched by the Centre that are empowering our women in rural Bharat. A small aerial device operated by a pilot from the ground, drones are now being used for various tasks ranging from surveillance and photography to transporting material.

Under this new scheme, rural women will be trained in flying drones, data analysis, and drone maintenance. Drone Didis will be trained to take up important tasks like evenly spreading urea, fertilizer, and pesticides in fields, monitoring crops, or analyzing soil.

With this training, they will not only become self-reliant but also extend agricultural information to every village.

***
Happy to share that Vedanta will facilitate training for the first batch of candidates from villages around our oil fields in Barmer. These women would be the first ever Drone Didis in Rajasthan who would be well-versed with the technology of drones and leading from the forefront in changing the agriculture landscape. The training will soon start at our Cairn Center of Excellence in collaboration with the Agricultural University, Jodhpur. My best wishes to these rising stars!

The farmers of our country and the daughters of our country... together they will contribute to the progress of the nation. Jai Naari Shakti, Jai Kisaan!
