BALCO Organises
Coal Commercial Success Meet

In the last year, I have been closely following the incredible story of Nvidia, a California-based semiconductor company. Amazingly, it has just overtaken Google's parent Alphabet and Amazon to become the 4th most valuable company in the world with current market cap of $1.83 trillion.

Development of these products is happening at back offices in India. India needs a world class semiconductor ecosystem. Government has been farsighted and progressive with its policies.

Domestic manufacturing of semiconductors and display glass (equally important in all devices) will not only enable technology leadership but also facilitate access for 1.4 billion Indians to affordable electronics whether laptops, smartphones or TVs, automobile, and others. It is tomorrow's oil.

... The transformative potential of this sector for livelihoods is huge. I am very confident we will be successful in building something better than even Silicon Valley in India.

This will fulfil the dream of the $5 trillion economy, create massive jobs and lead to highest revenue generation for the government.

Technology is all about speed and trust. As Vedanta is in this business in Taiwan, Korea and Japan, I am very confident that it will happen in India. And take our country to a different level.

#Semiconductor

TOPLINE Nvidia's market value surpassed those of fellow technology titans Amazon and Alphabet on Monday, an almost unbelievable feat accomplished as Nvidia's stock more than quadrupled over the last 15 months as investors bought into Nvidia's market-leading position in artificial intelligence.
